A Wrong Meaning Given a Letter from Justice Harlan Excites the Hopes of the Coy Gang.

A rumor prevailed on the streets yesterday that word had been received from Washington by Judge Woods announcing that the decision of the Supreme Court in the Coy case, to be handed down next Monday, would reverse that of the lower court. The whole matter arose out of an unwarranted interpretation of a few lines in a letter which Judge Woods had received on Wednesday from Judge Harlan. The truth was, however, that Judge Woods had urged Justice Harlan to have his opinion printed in the Federal Law Reports, not so much because of what it contained in the issue here, but because it gave an opinion on a number of incidental points of interest which were developed at the trial of Coy and Bernhamer, such as an alleged misconduct of jurors, and jurors receiving communications which the defense claimed affected the verdict. The Justice's letter was simply an announcement that he had gone to work to rewrite his opinion carefully for publication. It is reported that Coy, Bernhamer and the rest of the crowd on trial were jubilant over the supposed favorable decision to be given next Monday, Coy remarking gleefully: "We've got 'em at last." When the facts, however, became known their high hopes fell to earth again. Judge Harlan's letter said: "I suppose the opinion in the Coy case will be brought in at next Saturday's conference (meaning today), and will be announced next Monday. I will send you a telegram as to point decided, and you may make such use of it as you deem proper. As soon as court adjourns I will go to work on my opinion of last February and send it to the Federal Reporter."

CULLINGS FROM THE COURTS.

A Case That Involves a Test of the Ten-Hour Law.

The constitutionality of the law which constitutes ten hours as a day's work is to be tested in the Superior Court. In May, 1885, Eli S. Ingram and John A. Duncan contracted with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to work an indefinite period, and they received for their work eighteen cents per hour, remaining with the company until Jan. 1, 1887. They claim that during all that time they were required to work twelve hours per day, although they were paid but ten hours. They now bring suit to recover the balance of thirty-six cents per day for the whole time, which they allege is due them. Each of them asks $350 back pay. The case is a new one to the courts.

Mrs. Mantle's Allegations.

Mrs. Minnie Mantle, who has figured before the courts so frequently in various cases, has applied to the Superior Court for a divorce from her husband, William H. Mantle, to whom she was married less than a year ago. She says her life with Mantle has not been what she had reason to believe it would be. Mantle's former wife died suddenly from the bursting of a blood vessel, resulting as the coroner held from the abuse of her husband, and soon after her demise Mantle was married to the woman who now seeks to be separated from him. Mrs. Mantle's principal allegation is in respect to the fact that her husband has frequently threatened to kill her, and has driven her from home.

Must Pay His Wife's Board.

Judge Walker has decided that if a man deserts his wife and she engages boarding agency, the husband may be held liable for her legitimate expenses of living. The decision was rendered in the case of Roger Parry against Alpha Medsker, who left his wife and went to California. She sought a home at Parry's, and after Medsker had returned and procured a divorce, suit was brought against him for the amount of his wife's board bill. Under the instructions of the Judge, the jury returned a verdict in favor of Parry for $640, the full amount asked.

The Trial of John Stull.

The jury in the Stull arson case will be instructed this morning. The argument was completed last evening. John S. Duncan spoke all forenoon in behalf of the accused, and Prosecutor Mitchell occupied the afternoon with the closing argument in behalf of the State. If Stull is convicted this time the trial of J. J. Hilton, who is jointly indicted with him, will be set for immediate hearing.

Thomas Wren's Claim.

The Wren damage suit against the city is nearing a close. The oral testimony has all been submitted, and yesterday was consumed in examining the old city records, with reference to the contract for the improvement of South Tennessee street. The argument will be heard to-day, but the case will likely not be submitted to the jury before to-morrow evening.
